

The Miami-Dade Domestic Preparedness Strategy

citizen  corps

emergency management

February 2, 2004

Executive Summary

Only through a collaborative and systematic approach can we as a community hope to achieve a state of readiness against the threat of terrorism. The Miami-Dade Domestic Preparedness Strategy serves as the roadmap for achieving that end state. Through its application, Miami-Dade and its municipalities can mobilize and organize local resources to provide maximum security against terrorist attacks, whether from foreign or domestic sources. That does not mean that the Miami-Dade community intends to supplant state or federal domestic preparedness roles or responsibilities. On the contrary application of the Strategy ensures continuity and consistency between local goals and state and federal priorities for domestic preparedness.

State and federal grant funding has always been competitive: domestic preparedness funding is no less so. State and federal agencies are still grappling with the best way to funnel domestic preparedness dollars to the local level; this Strategy will help the Miami-Dade community gain funding prominence. Miami-Dade County's status as a unique metropolitan community with both tremendous capabilities and challenges places us in a position to influence funding methodologies at both the state and federal level. By demonstrating a unified front in the application of the Strategy and by building partnerships as a result of implementing initiatives contained herein, participating organizations will not only build support for their grant applications, but will also gain a significant edge over organizations that apply for those same grants independently.

On a practical level, the Miami-Dade Homeland Security Strategy helps prepare our community for the threat of terrorism by providing direction to county, municipal, and private organizations with a role in homeland security:

- It assesses the local ability to meet state and federally identified homeland security objectives.
- It guides the implementation of a specific set of goals that the Miami-Dade community considers important to attaining domestic preparedness.
- It provides a system of support and collaboration on issues of domestic preparedness and attainment of grant funding.

The Miami-Dade Domestic Preparedness Strategy is the blueprint for building a comprehensive system of domestic preparedness in Miami-Dade. It is designed to give everyone in Miami-Dade, with a demonstrable role in domestic preparedness, a voice in its development and implementation. It provides a methodology for prioritizing community-wide initiatives and organization-specific projects. It also has a structure that is formal enough to provide clear roles and responsibilities, yet flexible enough to promote new ideas and concepts. While this Strategy is only the first step in a long path, it gives the Miami-Dade community a head-start. The Miami-Dade Office of Emergency Management (OEM) is committed to the tenets of this Strategy and will use it to support the grant applications of those agencies that choose to partner with OEM by submitting projects for inclusion in the Strategy, participating actively in the Terrorism Advisory Committee, and promoting the Strategy's goals and objectives.